

As explained in our Privacy Policy, IP Australia is authorised to collect information provided on this form under the Patents Act 1990 (the Patents Act). The information provided on this form (the information), including personal information about any person, will be used for the purposes of the Patents Act including, as appropriate:

- to process your, or another person's, patent application;
- to process a request or notice in relation to a patent or patent application;
- to enable third parties and IP Australia to contact you about your patent or patent application or about a request or notice that you have filed in relation to a patent or patent application; or
- to perform other functions under the Patents Act.

The Patents Act requires or authorises the Commissioner of Patents to disclose and publish the information provided in this form in specified circumstances, as explained in IP Australia's Privacy Policy. This includes disclosure to foreign intellectual property (IP) offices in a number of countries and to IP rights' information subscribers. The information may be published in Official Journals, Registers and data bases in Australia and elsewhere which may be accessed over the internet and/or as paper copy. Periodically, IP Australia (or a company under contract to us) will use your personal information to contact you to conduct market research about our products and services.

IP Australia is committed to complying with the Privacy Act 1988, which contains information privacy principles that IP Australia must observe when collecting, using and disclosing personal information. The personal information handling practices of IP Australia are detailed in IP Australia's Privacy Policy, which contains information about accessing and amending records held by IP Australia containing personal information.
